- A. See CU Senate website for membership, policies, and schedule
- B. Press Enterprise editorial (see attached)
- C. Social media update (D. Knorr): concern at last LA about the Facebook pages being CU-Lock Haven, CU-Mansfield, but Bloomsburg U of PA. Strategic Communications team worked hard to get this changed. All other social media pages have been changed over to CU.
- D. CU Town Hall Feb 3 at 2:00 pm will include updates on finances and enrollment
- E. AY 2025-26 curriculum proposal deadline is End Of Day Feb 3
- F. Learning Center. Chris Cummings 1/22 email includes course coverages and support services. Also, new website
- G. Campus-wide printing via PaperCut. Enables students, faculty, staff to print at any campus
- H. Career Intensive Boot Camp (CIBC). At Mansfield – Fri, Feb 21 to Feb 22 in Alumni (see below)
- I. Musical: Hunchback of Notre Dame. March 6-9 in Straughn
- J. Showcase of Student Scholarship May 2, registration will open within the next month. Maegen Borzok will email more info. If anyone has questions, suggestions, or would like to be involved in the planning/implementation, please email Maegen
- K. Mansfield Traditions Task Force. Concluded work and made recommendations last semester. If you have additional suggestions or feedback, please contact Maegen.
- L. Presence. After transition to CU website, old Mansfield club and org listings, contact info, meeting info, officers, advisors, etc. went away for everyone. Did club and org fairs at Mountie Days and again in October. Presence is a web-based system for students to access club and org info, events, etc. Bloom has had for years, LH completed install in the fall. After working on most of last semester, Mansfield rolled out to club presidents and advisors on Monday: once a few more clubs and organizations are registered, plan to roll out to all students next week.
- M. Newsletter (D. Knorr):
 - i. Working together with Strategic Communications, we plan on having each of the three community e-newsletters come out on the 1st of each month (or the following Monday if the 1st falls on a weekend).
 - ii. The first issue is being slated for Monday, March 3rd, with a monthly cadence following that (probably with a break in June / July).

- iii. The webpage will be switching over within the next couple of weeks to allow for people to sign up to one of the three (or all three if preferred).
- iv. As far as submittals, we are going to ask the university community to continue following the exiting process of submitting all events and happenings to The Triad. We (on the back end) will segment out public, open-to-community events for the community e-newsletters. That way faculty, staff, and students do not have to do something separate.
- v. We are consolidating the platform to the one Lock Haven currently uses as it seems to be the best. The Bloomsburg list will be ported over to that platform.
- vi. Going to use Constant Contact.

IV. Committee Reports

A. Executive Committee

- i. Elections Subcommittee (N. Delaney): looking ahead to spring elections, possibly an interim policy for tie-breakers. Seats that will be up for election at MU this spring: At Large Faculty Senator, At Large Staff Senator, Local Assembly Secretary (Faculty of Staff), Academic Policy Committee – At Large Faculty, Diversity Equity & Inclusion (Faculty), Elections Subcommittee (Faculty), Enrollment Management Subcommittee (Faculty), Finance Committee (Faculty), First Year Experience Subcommittee (Faculty), IT Subcommittee (Faculty), Student Success and Campus Life (Faculty). If you have interest in the openings or would like to know more about what they entail, I encourage you to read the bylaws for each committee using the following link which will direct you to the University Senate site.
<https://www.commonwealthu.edu/about/university-senate-governance/senate-membership>
- ii. Space and Facilities Subcommittee (H. Jackson): meetings scheduled and currently gearing up to submit the inclement weather policy

B. Academic Policy Committee (D. Rotella): two policies: Academic Dismissal and Priority Registration both ready for the first reading

- i. Enrollment Management Subcommittee (S. Stout): CU Admissions policy was approved in the fall, started drafting transfer admissions policy
- ii. IT Subcommittee (S. Ji): No report, first meeting is set

C. Advancement Committee (J. Crowley): two policies are going to their first reading at the next committee meeting, a Gift-in-Kind Policy and a Fundraising Policy. A reminder: the 2025 Mounties ALL-IN Day Of Giving is Thursday, April 10 (10:00 AM) to Friday, April 11 (10:00 AM). This is our annual online, 'crowd-funding' event. If your campus program/area would like to have a fundraising section on the ALL-IN website, please reach out to Kate Billmeyer (or me) with a description of what campus organization or program you're raising money for and we will make sure it is created for you. You will then have a unique link to that page that you can share out with friends and family so they can give to your cause. In preparation for this, there will be a brief training session on how the ALL-IN 24hr fundraiser works on: Thursday, March 6th at 10am in Alumni Hall 317

D. DEI Committee (S. Ji): No report, first meeting is set

E. Finance Committee (X. Zhou): No report

F. Student Success and Campus Life (Holly Jackson NA): 3 more policies up for first readings this semester

- i. First Year Experience Subcommittee (L. Pifer): Three credit first year seminar has survived into Fall 2025, but it will have to be in larger class sizes. Working closely with admissions to track new students who need it, trying to help in larger classes with things like peer mentors. Need funding for more peer mentors. Two members are going to an FYE conference next month. Planning to hold a one-day summit over spring break to discuss FYE at different PASSHE campuses. Sechrist: we're going to be closer to 50 students per section. McEvoy: this goes against every single best practice for first year seminars. Borzok taught FYE for the first time last semester, loved it, taught it at BU hybrid, but the format did not allow enough time with the students. She does not endorse utilizing a multi-modal setup for FYE, strongly encouraging in-person teaching of this course. Sechrist: she has asked the committee to look into all possible ways to make FYE effective without as much faculty load for this course.

- iii. Cathy Martin sent office hours for the semester
- iv. She'd love to hear ideas, but also issues
- v. Shout out to SGA- this is a very passionate group of students who really care about this campus

H. Provost (Provost Kiec):

- i. She is planning to be on campus more often, so feel free to come see her, and don't be surprised if she comes by classes
- ii. They are working on different course modalities, and she appreciates everyone's work on that
- iii. Course modalities and early semester issues- the tech has not necessarily been working. Some classes which started multi-classroom are going to synchronous online, but they are trying to work on other solutions, they are trying to prioritize in-person for hands-on courses for fall
- iv. Fall scheduling updates: there may be some differences in how scheduling is being done, ask your Dean if you have questions- contact your Dept. Chair first
- v. Thank you to IT for getting us in a room that works for LA today
- vi. For those dealing with the multi-classroom issues, a plea to try to keep the in-person portions of that in-person as much as possible. We have promised students an in-person experience, so we need to honor that. Pifer- there were students locked out of a classroom where they were supposed to be doing multi- classroom. McEvoy- we need to do as much as we can to ensure that the modalities we agreed to are being fulfilled. IT is working really hard, but we need to do better. We need to keep in mind for the fall semester that we make sure everything works before the semester begins- it is not fair to the students. Borzok: it is up to us to make this the best experience for the students, regardless of modality, even if we need help from faculty on other campuses to get students into rooms, get them computers, etc. We should be reserving a room for students who are taking a course on another campus so they can all work together.
- vii. Verno: are these the scheduling directives for fall? In the fall, make sure you build your schedules with student success in mind. Make sure upper-level courses are scheduled to fill, not just make.

Pair courses with multiple sections at the same time. Multiple sections will be opened sequentially- there are issues with that: how do students schedule, how do faculty schedule, who makes these decisions, etc. Kiec: I will try to put something together that involves more explanation about the plans. Thank you for the feedback.

I. President (President Hanna)

- i. Thank you for all the ideas and patience, thank you for focus on students
- ii. Thank you for helping at Lock Haven with the aftermath of the flooding. Electricians from all three campuses went to Lock Haven and did the work, all students were able to move in on time. The few that have been displaced will be back in their assigned rooms this weekend.
- iii. Clearfield: announcement was not rushed. None of our colleagues, faculty and staff, will be impacted until May 2027. Everyone will have the opportunity to move to Lock Haven main campus after that period. Mansfield is not next. The university is committed to make sure all three main campuses of CU reach stability. Dispel this rumor so that enrollment at MU continues to grow. Deposits for MU fall 2025 are up from last year. We need to keep that going. His goal is to be at MU every Wed. Come see him so he can help.
- iv. Space and facilities: we have more space at MU and Lock Haven than we need. We cannot continue to pay utilities for buildings that are empty or half-empty. No decisions have been made, but they are working on figuring out what to do to shrink the footprint.
- v. McEvoy: she has had several discussions with the President recently and she supports working together moving forward

VI. Updates

A. Policy Review (M. Decker):

- i. Send policies to Mark Decker by Feb. 13 if you want it to go before Senate this semester

Mansfield may be a limb worth cutting

The number of high-school graduates in the United States hit an all-time high in 2023, according to a new study from the Western Interstate Commission on Higher Education.

That may come as a surprise to people in this area, where we've been hearing about a declining number of high school graduates in Pennsylvania for more than a decade.

But 2023, warns the WICHE study, isn't the first in a series of growing numbers of graduates. Instead it's approaching a peak year in 2025. Across the nation, the number of high-school graduates is expected to shrink — by about 13% over the next 20 years.

Pennsylvania, specifically, will see one of the largest drops in the Northeast, with 17% fewer high-school graduates from 2024 to 2041, projections show. In 2014, the state had 145,200 high-school graduates. In 2024, it had 135,400. In 2041, it's expected to have 117,000. That's second only to neighboring New York's 27% drop.

Given all these enrollment trends, it seems reasonable to ask: What is Commonwealth University's plan to survive this coming graduate drain?

For years, graduating high school seniors have acted like life-saving blood transfusions keeping the school at the top of College Hill vital. While Bloomsburg University has shrunk in size as Pennsylvania's number of college graduates declined, it has not been doing so as quickly as many of the other State System of Higher Education schools.

But then SSHE decided to graft two limbs onto Bloomsburg that were dying on their own — Lock Haven and Mansfield.

From 2011 to 2021 (the year before the campuses merged), BU had shrunk about a quarter — from the equivalent of 9,200 full-time students to 6,950. Meanwhile, Lock Haven and Mansfield had lost nearly half their populations — Mansfield shrunk from 2,900 students to 1,500; Lock Haven from 5,100 to 2,700.

Since the merger, the three campuses have continued to shrink. For 2024, Bloomsburg had 6,474 undergraduate students on campus. Lock Haven had 2,214. Mansfield had 1,170.

And these were during years where — nationwide, at least — the number of high-school graduates was increasing.

If schools across the nation now will be competing for a shrinking pool of graduates, what can Commonwealth do to ensure the transfusion of new life it gets at the beginning of each fall continues?

In its report, WICHE suggests schools try to find new ways of attracting and retaining adult learners, including by giving them college credit through an assessment of their previous learning and work experience. Adult students are something Commonwealth has talked about attracting in the past.

And Commonwealth's new provost Michelle Kiec has said she wants to ensure the programs the school offers match up with the demands of the job market. That's a good first step to put the school on its most profitable path.

But we'd suggest another step would be to review whether those grafted limbs in Lock Haven and Mansfield are benefitting Commonwealth, or becoming gangrenous.

Mansfield especially bears watching. Located in Pennsylvania's rural northern tier, with a state shrinking even more quickly to its north, shouldering $29 million of debt from a housing rebuild that failed to attract more students, it appears to be the weakest link in the Commonwealth family.

It may be time for the school to ask the state what steps it would need to take to shut down the campus. A closure would represent a backward step, a shrinking of educational opportunity in the state.

But with the data suggesting across the nation, there will be fewer and fewer students applying to attend college over the next two decades, it may be an amputation that allows for a healthier recovery in the future.

LETTERS

PE misdiagnosed Mansfield

The Press Enterprise rightly raises questions about Commonwealth University's plan to navigate the decline in high school graduates (17% decrease from 2024-2041). State and regional public higher education institutions across the country face the same challenge.

However, we at CU-Mansfield take issue with the Press Enterprise's characterization of Mansfield as a "grafted limb" that has become "gangrenous." The suggestion that an institution that has been the linchpin of northcentral PA since 1857 should be "amputated" is not only insensitive and short-sighted but also drives a wedge between working-class Pennsylvanians who seek a better future for their children.

The communities of Bloomsburg, Lock Haven and Mansfield have far more similarities than differences. We share the same values, and our campuses are a vital source of economic development and social mobility. All three campuses serve as hubs for the arts, culture, science, sports and numerous other opportunities for community engagement. Moreover, our alumni all have strong ties and deep affection for their alma maters.

Three years ago, Bloomsburg, Lock Haven and Mansfield consolidated into a single entity, Commonwealth University. The name is appropriate. "Commonwealth" means "the people of a community, united by a common factor, and dedicated to the public well-being." To suggest one campus "is a limb worth cutting" would pit communities against each other at a time we most need to support each other.

We appreciate our campuses' rich histories. Each went through several different iterations and at one point were all state teachers' colleges. Rather than pine about the past, however, we are focused on innovation and problem-solving. Integration has not been easy, and we still have a lot of work to do. As a single administration, faculty and student body, we are stronger together, harnessing the Power of Three to expand our regional footprint. CU's Professional U program has already had great success assisting students in job preparation, networking and career development.

The Press Enterprise correctly diagnosed some challenges facing Commonwealth University, but the prognosis for our success depends upon forging a sustainable path forward together.
